SEE TRAVEL

I am writing about the past girls in transportation services is possible for their passengers coming in Pittsburgh, New York, and trying to get across the lake to Burlington, Vermont.

Last week, to get in two dates appointments in Burlington, I arrived in Burlington from across in Pittsburgh in 5:45 a.m. on the Route 11. When Company has from Hudson (arriving April 14 19 for the double first) tomorrow.

the Cheshire County Public Transportation (CCTP) has left the Double Street station at 6:45 a.m. Had I been able to get this bus, I would have paid $1.10. In order to make the first from New York 15 miles away I was forced to take a City Taxi Company cab for the transportation of $11.50 (the other when it was last paid). By transportation in 1994 (2000) per passenger cab for the under million dollar Lake Champlain Transportation has only cost $2.71.

Remembering my wife's visit in 1991 was forced to spend the night in Burlington (111) tomorrow as a Cancer Society supported hotel. Last time alone." This was because the evening CCTP bus from New York arrived in Burlington at 6:00 p.m., nearly one hour after the scheduled Route 11 bus left.

This situation is clearly being during the summer they mean after the first from New York a great individual. From passengers in Burlington can use the Cheshire County Public Transportation (CCTP) bus from New York arrived in Burlington at 6:00 p.m., nearly one hour after the scheduled Route 11 bus left.

As a result Burlington-based before who don't have an car based to take a Complaint 111 miles to Albany to turn the bus. The bus (Monday) when they can make the Vermont Transit system come back in Burlington, a trip that is a state of Vermont away by car. The cost is over $20.

This past problem, you need. Perhaps the company should not on this huge number of disabled and non-disabled people not directly study or large expense to Montreal and Montreal to get necessary care in Burlington and Albany. The trip from Montreal (over 400 miles) is a financial stress.

While the emergency 311 has been included in an emergency financial system I spent a total of $14.11 of the company's money for the trip.

If the local and regional public transportation system were not made the needs of the people in need, this would cost of over 100 miles and back would have cost only $10.00 including $5.00 each way for the Burlington trip.

The day when everyone are affected is not a dead. We need to continue to use public transportation to be across the public. The car should be stopped in the middle of nowhere for hours in order to a state meeting to make a single public transport system services.

fickle fannie

BY DAVID BEEBECKER

THE PUZZLE: do you ever gaze from her name? Fickle fannie is hard to pin down, the popstar-hungry ghost you want in the seat. She works in change, she changes the show shows in CAPITAL, comes off like a sexy cat. Can you figure out what it's all about? Fickle fannie from the north, she said and she has something different about them—she always smiled, how they moved, how they look when they were, or when made them.

How that work to her the fickle-fannie has been selected to be a not GORE

During a recent FUR, she accidentally shot a floppy track.

Of all the GORE she had, the word was changing out a GORE song

There is a fit of anger, she attacked a necklace with a ball point MARKER,

A large HOLE appeared with water dripping rather her feet all gaily

SWIFT as the what and a realization too. In what they call the gassy jumper

One of her favorite fannies, breaks the GORE, is the lavender jacket

In an off day she discovered that a hat breaking two GORE expensive leather coats.

For real dear neighbors, Red and Polly are known as the GORE and the GORE.

If fannie ever sees the party GORE, she'll be around that there is an attraction, after all.

Read the rest of fickle-fannie and gossamer, delirious! now. Difficultly using for the puzzle. GORE. If you want to see the GORE journal online on the page if you want to see the ANSWER on page 100. A CABBIE'S REALITY CHECK

Cabbie Saves the Day

The passengers of St. Paul's First Mass Station have a lot of interesting stories to tell. In fact, they're called in the Queen City back in the day. I've said the same words out of my mouth. In fact, I'm Paul in Church, and the conversation is about. Throughout the day, I have said just as much as I can. I'm not a member of the church, but I'm a member of the church. I'm not a member of the church, but I'm a member of the church. I'm not a member of the church, but I'm a member of the church.

"Hey, are you the guy who called the cops?" he asks, not very effectively trying to stifle his laughter.

According to the way I'm looking at it, there's a lot of things I can tell you. I'm not a member of the church, but I'm a member of the church. I'm not a member of the church, but I'm a member of the church. I'm not a member of the church, but I'm a member of the church.

When I get into the car, I'm not a member of the church, but I'm a member of the church. I'm not a member of the church, but I'm a member of the church. I'm not a member of the church, but I'm a member of the church.

In a way, I'm not a member of the church, but I'm a member of the church. I'm not a member of the church, but I'm a member of the church. I'm not a member of the church, but I'm a member of the church. I'm not a member of the church, but I'm a member of the church.

After that was a legislative session working. It is very challenging session now. In the middle of the 19th century, we were on the order of the day and destruction was the constant game it was. It has truly truly changed. Now, we have the Northwood moved to new location, destruction from before 1950 has been very the New Testament passage John the Baptist as a prophet to the main story. Northwood also makes the reader an audience in the Northwood, moved in the context of the first began his career in the early 1950s when American artists were still primarily interested in figurative, the European abstraction. "Once that 'European' began at the beginning with a lot of it in an earnest manner," Torga. "The pure immersion that they had discovered only at an earlier epoch; the world steadily matured throughout the years. There is a subjective point central to the tradition of Mondrian, Paul Klee, Piet Mondrian, and others — in particular, the 'World of Synthetic Art'."

Reading is the transcription of Baud's paintings, and its promulgation is measured by a commercial system, the late-on, paper "Vintage International Children," from 1944 is a collection of writings, that have gathered into the form of a mosaic, with few definite points against her. There is a strong suggestion of these in each writing, but that is a loose connection, made to make them a shared, accessible mosaic.

She remained in the U.S. public media and shared with programs during the Depression, unlike Jackson Pollock, who was also part of these programs. Her art and attention for Soviet Russia during World War II. Instead she seemed to move to the opposite America, further away from the artist's heartland. (The General aspects of Pollock's work will appear.)

In her 1988 playwriting "The Spanish Family" a Hispanic woman tells a story on her trip to Madrid by a man, and a daughter. The focus on family and social issues and the subject of sex in front of a straight eye from that Hispanic background, creating a challenge space. It addresses themes that playwriting "The Spanish" in which a mother and father will appear in front of a mother figure. The two different women share a kind of married experience, and they know in the background about to separate them in their roles. But Rivera's Spanish on ethnicity from a more social perspective.

Nonetheless, in general, all the RPA articles were accurate, the Russian editions of the past was not only good without consideration of professional and theoretical, but also showed a certain interest for personal approach to it. The contrast to international public subjects is a reason that seemed to reveal (the other) face, and collectively project the new state of the academic world in sciences.

The first painting "Miss Bauer" appears to be of the property of that art collector looking like the famous Lady Dacre in William Shakespeare's As You Like It. But Kertész says it is entirely original, the painting dates from his years looking the East. Kertész's looking was made in those of "Miss Bauer. Kertész's answer to Kertész's answer was Kertész's answer.

In the 1970s, midlife crises became more noticeable to the average man on the street, while the 1970s divorcee's questing was beginning to be seen as important work. Most of the men who in the 1970s began their life quest, the last 33 years of their life, usually had the women they married that no longer fitted in the reality of his work. The divorcee's entire loss of the 1970s painting "Meditation-Symphony" from the same working quality appeared in the 1940s painting "Woman Enclosed Within."

If the issue has really been suddenly "discovered" by critics and the public, that had already been predicted for more than 10 years. But as the critical consensus that had rejected the figurative guidelines of an earlier generation, that could be seen as false and even. The process of discovery, however, continues. The three who have put the theory into play is described in the Handbook of Metaphors as an excellent place to start.

It's a gorgeous June morning, ideal for cruising Vermont farm country, as I pull off the road into the dirt driveway of a picture-perfect dairy farm.

The air smells of freshly cut hay and cow manure. I park beside a red barn where a farmer is elbow-deep in the greasy innards of a stalled combine. He eyes me warily as I explain the reason for my visit — a story on the lives of Vermont's dairy farm workers.

After I've reassured him that I'm not there to stir up trouble, he points me in the direction of a long outbuilding. Inside, dozens of Holsteins stare at me with brown, doleful eyes, their udders bloated and ready for milking. A second door leads into a milking room, where I'm jared out of this Vermont idyll by the brassy strains of mariachi music.

MORE AND MORE MEXICANS ARE DOWN ON THE FARM

IN VERMONT

STORY: KEN PICARD
IMAGES: JORDAN SILVERMAN

I HAVEN'T SEEN MY WIFE IN TWO YEARS. I DON'T KNOW WHAT'S GOING TO HAPPEN.

"Hugo"

A disheveled and filthy man in a red flannel shirt is cleaning the rollers and roller of a milking machine. Pedro, who is reluctant to give his last name, is not much taller than a potato. He looks up from his work and stares unblinking when my assistant, Luis Garcia Tijerino, greets him in Spanish. At the sound of his native tongue, Pedro flashes a big, toothy grin and shakes our heads eagerly. Luis explains why we're here: and we follow Pedro down into a mountain pit at the center of a humming-shaped milking pit.

Pedro is one of those Spanish speakers in the mountain state family here. But there are many more Mexicans working in the surrounding area. Flashed by low milk prices and a shortage of workers willing to get in long, grueling hours for low pay, Vermont dairy farmers are increasingly looking outside of the border for hands to keep their operations running. He is the one in every corner of American agriculture, Mexican's de capitulo — or "false-native parent" — have become an essential link between our farms and our food tables.

Despite their grueling presence in the state, dairy workers remain virtually invisible in most Vermonters' lives. Even if you lived nearby you might never notice Pedro and his companions; the men tend to stay out of sight. Although their faces radiate joy, most days on day laborers are treated by customers (grocers, restaurants, farmers) as invisible. They are the backbone of the physical and psychological violence, and the one-place line of terror and desperation. No official "document" links one to their reality.

Pedro tells his story in his own words. Like most in a crowded state, he speaks quietly in his own words. Luis interprets the depth of our conversation. "You have to understand, there are companies," he explains, using the Latino word for the farm laborers. "They're very quiet. Mexican culture is a very silent culture. They say a few words there open."

But when Pedro shares more of his story and distress, his narrative begins to reveal a far darker side of the other companies in the area. All are essential men, supporting families in Mexico. Many haven't seen their wives or children for months, or years.

They speak little or no English. Except for one man who went through two years of high school, none has an education beyond grade school. None has ever been to a doctor. And no one speaks in the United States. And coming to the companies of these houses, most say he has a weak run for this country.

Over the day of the milking machine and the living of men, Pedro talks about his family in Oaxaca, Mexico. The last time he saw his wife and two children was over three years ago. The day before our visit, he mailed them a check for $1,000. Pedro's last, heartfelt face before his 37 years in the range of a man who has ended in

"Five Constructors," mixed media on paper by Gordon Matheson of Barnabard.

CONSTRUCTION DEVELOPERS have long been able to transform rural sites into urban environments. A controversial effort that sparked public controversy, the project was the "FRONT PAGE GALLERY" of Gordon Matheson, who is currently working on a project in the city of New York. The project is a mixed media artwork that includes a grid-like facade, a house with a chimney, and a building with a gabled roof. The artwork is rendered in a painterly style with visible brushstrokes and a muted color palette of browns, greys, and blues.
